

KS5 Curriculum Overview: Politics

Core aims of the subject at Key Stage 5

Politics shapes a huge part of our lives from the type of society we live in to the chances we have to succeed. Through the study of politics, students are able to understand the ever changing world around them and communicate their understanding on political events. Students who study politics are encouraged to keep abreast of current affairs and political events in both the UK and USA.

Our aim at Brine Leas is to create a partnership between staff and students that is professional, educational and supportive, at a time when the transition through education and childhood can be very challenging. Our purpose is to create the very best thinkers, debaters and communicators. We want students to be able to navigate the best course for themselves through an understanding of power and influence in the 21st century and to appreciate how decisions are made that affect their lives. This course is for people who want to understand more about how politics and government actually work.

Students of politics at Brine Leas should have an inquisitive mind and an eagerness to embrace complex ideas and differing views of the world. Our politics curriculum helps students to explain the world that they live in and decisions that are made by those with power by exploring current and historic thinking. Politics students are independent and resilient learners who engage readily in the process of exploring belief systems of different peoples in differing societies and draw parallels with the present. Through teaching both within the classroom and beyond, politics students at Brine Leas engage with information aimed to produce citizens who understand their role based on the world around them and to understand others in local, national and global communities. The curriculum aims to give students the confidence to defend their beliefs and the ability to be open-minded about the beliefs of others, approaching political ideas with a critical eye. We expect the highest academic standards, co-operation, and effort from all.

During Year 12, students develop a broad knowledge and understanding of the political system of the UK. Unit 1 focuses on the theme of political behaviour in the UK. It explores how people's different patterns of participation can be explained and the forms of participation in a democracy. Furthermore, it looks at the importance of voting behaviour, the influence of electoral systems in communicating political opinion and the controversies surrounding the use of referendums. The principal institutions through which people's participation is achieved is also considered through political parties and pressure groups. Students also study unit 2 in Year 12 which focuses on the process of governing the UK. Here, we look at the extent to which Britain's unique constitution regulates the process of government and maintains the balance between individual rights and the power of the state is explored. Students also look at the role of Westminster in providing a democratic element in government is examined as well as the degree to which power rests in the hands of unelected bureaucrats. The direction which government takes is analysed at the very apex of power in arrangements within the core executive.

In Year 13, students turn their focus to the government and politics of the USA. Here, we focus on the nature and significance of the US Constitution, the framework of government laid down in the US Constitution and the structure, role and powers of the US Congress. Moreover, students will consider the party and committee system and their significance within Congress. In regards to the executive branch, we explore sources of presidential power and the relationship between the presidency and other institutions e.g. the cabinet. Another focus of the Year 13 course is around the electoral systems, political parties and debates concerning the power of pressure groups in the USA. Finally, an additional part of the Year 13 course involves a comparative element and understanding political ideas. In this part of the course, students spend time analysing and explaining similarities and differences between the two systems using structural, rational and cultural theories. The core ideologies discussed also include liberalism, conservatism and socialism.

As teachers of politics, we encourage students to develop methods of political enquiry. This includes considering how evidence is used and how and why contrasting arguments and interpretations have been constructed over political issues. These skills are incorporated into our lessons with students regularly asked to analyse political articles, creating opportunities for them to apply these skills. Politics students at Brine Leas complete their education equipped with the skills set to research, analyse and evaluate. These skills will equip students with the skills needed for their future preparation. The transferable skills developed through studying politics will assist students in their analytical and debate skills; including the capacity for thinking creatively, intellectual rigour and independence.

Assessment

Regular essays in the style of the A level exam paper, both comprehension and article analysis. Regular knowledge based quizzes to consolidate knowledge. In year 13 as part of their 'ninth hour' students are to complete a range of activities that consolidate knowledge and extend awareness of political concepts. Students will also have summative assessments once a year.

Homework

Regular reading to develop contextual knowledge, questions set from the textbook and activities set to extend knowledge from the lesson from political reviews.

Guided readings from set texts and extra reading from journals and articles. Assessment questions can also be set for homework.

Clubs and/or intervention

1:1s meetings arranged if appropriate

Parental/Carer support

Phone calls home, Bromcom behaviour tracking, Data Collection points.

Helpful sources of information

Course Booklet has many resources listed to assist students with developing knowledge.

Spring 1	Big Idea: Political parties Rationale: Political parties represent the essential foundations of how politics operates in the US. Their development mirrors the ever changing political landscape of the US, as do the myriad of policies which they each propose. By understanding the different perspectives of political parties, students will gain an appreciation for the many shades of ideology that exists, particularly within the Democrat and Republican parties, and the factors which allow them to achieve electoral success or otherwise. Students will also consider the challenges to the traditional party system that exists in the US, whether that be the threat posed by minor parties, the way in which they are organised, their internal divisions or the extent of political polarization that exists in the US. By studying US political parties, greater insight can be provided with respect to the relative state of UK political parties.

Whilst it is worth recognising the similarities that exist between UK and US pressure group activity, it is worth emphasising to students the very different political culture that pressure groups in the US seek to exploit, not least in terms of the influence of money and the access points that are available to them. Through this students will realise the some of the most significant political influences in the US stem from pressure group activity even though much of their operation goes relatively unnoticed for much of the time.

Autumn 1	Big Idea: Democracy and participation Rationale: The operation of democracy is of fundamental importance of to the operation of government and politics in the UK. It is therefore useful to appreciate how democracy has developed in this country and the various forms that it takes. For democracy to function successfully, participation by citizens is required. The consequences of a lack of participation need to be considered alongside the positive effects that can result from it. Participation can, of course, come in many forms, although it worthwhile to explore which forms of participation have proved to be impactful in different contexts.
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ The development of suffrage since the Great Reform Act 1832. ➤ The significance of the Chartists. ➤ The significance of the Suffragettes. ➤ The nature of democracy. ➤ The different forms that democracy takes. ➤ Strengths of democracy. ➤ Weaknesses of democracy. ➤ The effectiveness of democracy in the UK. ➤ The different methods of participation. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Closed and open questioning in class. ➤ 9 mark application questions, focusing in particular on participation e.g. Explain and analyse three for there being a participation 'crisis' in the UK. ➤ 25 mark application questions, extract and essay based, focusing in particular on participation e.g. Analyse, evaluate and 	SMSC <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ 1b, 2c, 4a, 4b, 4e 	Future learning: A Level Politics A Level History A Level Law A Level Psychology Careers: Education Academia Journalism Civil Service Law Parliamentarian Political Researcher Anthropologist Communications Officer Policy Officer Activist

Big Idea: Elections and referendums Rationale: Elections are the most fundamental component of a democracy, not least because they are the means by which representatives of the people are elected, from which the government is drawn. It is therefore necessary to appreciate the importance of elections and the way in which their methodology can impact the form a government can take and the policies that derive from it. Referendums can also act as a key component of a democracy, shaping the political course of a country when it comes to deciding issues of crucial importance. It is important to recognise, however, that they are not the simplistic devices that they may first appear. As such, the use of referendums should be critically assessed.

Big Idea: Political parties

Rationale: Political parties represent the coming together of ideas. They are the building blocs fundamental to the operation of the key institutions of state, not least the executive and the legislature. They also allow for a means of political participation and have the capacity for people to identify with like-minded individuals within a collective body. It is this necessary to understand the role that UK political parties play and the ideas that they represent. Similarly, it is important to recognise their internal structures and the factors that determine their relative success.

Spring 1

- The origins, ideas and development of the Conservative, Labour, and Liberal Democrat parties.
- Party structures of Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrat parties.
- Leadership contests of Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrat parties.
- Party policies of Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrat parties.
- Parliamentary candidate selection of Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrat parties.
- Issues and debates around party funding.
- Party relations with, and influence of, the media.

- Closed and open questioning in class.
- 9 mark application questions, focusing in particular on party ideologies e.g. Explain and analyse three Thatcherite policies.
- 25 mark application questions, extract and essay based, focusing in particular on party systems e.g. Analyse, evaluate and compare the arguments in the above extract over the extent to which

Spring 2	Big Idea: Pressure groups Rationale: Pressure groups appear to be gaining in popularity and significance. It is important to analyse the reasons as to why they have gained in notoriety as a form of political participation and expression. The most ideal way to do this is through analysis of case studies in order to determine the factors which determine pressure group success and to reveal the wide variety of pressure groups that exist. Alongside this, there is a need to question the impact of pressure groups on political landscape, not least because there are advantages and disadvantages when it comes to their existence.

Big Idea: The European Union Rationale: Despite the impact of Brexit and the result of the 2016 EU referendum, it remains a purposeful exercise to explore the UK's changing relationship with the European Union. Part of this study requires one to understand the origins of the 'European project' and the structures and workings of the European Union itself Through this, the pros and cons of the EU can be appreciated, as can the consequences of Britain's eventual withdrawal.

Summer 1	Big Idea: The electoral process and direct democracy

Rationale: The American electoral system shares some common features with the UK electoral system, particularly when it comes to the fundamental reasons why elections are held. It has to be considered, however, that US elections have quite a number of features which are unique, and in themselves reveal quite a lot about US government and politics and American society as a whole. Likewise, elements of direct democracy in the US mirror those of the UK. Yet, once again, direct democracy in the US is by no means that same as it is in the UK and it is important to recognise how both elections and direct democracy operate, understanding the consequences of such practice.

Covering news and current affairs from the UK and US, it helps the students to understand how the UK and USA are run and develops research, written communication and debate skills. Students identify parallels, connections, similarities and differences between aspects of politics. This will ensure that students develop a critical awareness of the changing nature of politics and the relationships between political ideas, political institutions and political processes. The political ideas to be studied have relevance to both of the systems of government and politics.

	Big Idea: Conservatism Rationale: The study of political ideologies allows students to understand and appreciate their study of government and politics in the context of the much broader and sweeping ideas that underpin policy and decision-making. In recent times, it can be argued that conservatism has been the most successful of these ideologies, not least in terms of the electoral success of the UK's Conservative Party. Students will recognise the fundamental strands of conservative thinking, from its emphasis on a respect for the past to its ability to adapt and change. Conservatism is thus a somewhat contradictory way of thinking, yet students will study key conservative thinkers and learn about the reasons why they are advocates of it.

Spring 2	Big Idea: Nationalism Rationale: Nationalism and its rise has been responsible for many of the seismic events of the 20th and 21st Centuries.
